Local Letters ... No. 3.

SAN MARCOS, June 13, 1881.

My DEAR M.:

I saw an article in the Galveston News of May 25th, entitled "Pity the Cierks," which touched on a subject that has long interested me, and received my heart-left sympathics.

It was written briefly, simply and to the point, and contained an appeal to employers in behalf of their clerks on the propriety of closing all dry goods and grocery establishments at six o'clock in the evening, during these long sultry days of the summer.
Only a clerk can realize what a blessing

these few hours gained every day would be; and we who buy of them would find the blessing revert upon ourselves in their increased cheerfulness, peliteness and attention.

There is nothing more pathetic than There is nothing more pathetic than the pale lace, listless manner and tired smile of the dry-goods clerk. Standing all day—which is more fatiguing than manual labor—bearing with the thous and whims of a thousand whimsical dispositious—affects both body and mind, and after a while one or the other must atic—taking down one piece of goods and putting it back in the exact place again—will tell on the nervous system and make a bundle of irritabilities out of what ought to be a sound, healthy body what ought to be a sound, healthy body.

It is entirely unnecessary to keep a store open longer than aix o'clock—a person can as easily purchase his needs before that hour as afterwards—and if the practise of closing doors was general, forgetful housekeepers and thought less buyers would feel the necessity of supplying their wants in the early part of the day, and would do so or go without. Let this latter alternative come about occasionally, and it would bring its own losson.

I go even further than "Justice" in I go even further than "Justice" in his remarks, and think that clerks should have a half holiday every Saturday. The same rule would hold good here as in the case above.
What people would neglect to buy on Saturday, they would get on Monday. There would be no loss to merchants—some little trouble to un-methodical brains, perhaps, but such brains need cultivation, and a little application now and then, would not hurt them. good done the one class would justify the inconvenienc caused the other. Those who buy are so thoughtless of trouble to those who sell, that all my sympathies are with the later. A man has been known to wake up a druggist for the purpose of purchasing a cake of soap, or some other equally as trivial article.

We all know that soap is a very nece-sury and delightful thing to have, but the demand for it can seldom be so urgent as to excuse one is rousing a man from his slumbers in the middle of the night. It is certainly splendid disci-pline, and be who can patiently attend on such a customer, without "swearing tonio, a little swear," is already fit for the Mrs.

I trust the suggestion given in the eded by all merchants in the land. We will then cease to see so many youthul faces with tired droop about eye and lip, and sickly hue of brow and theek, like flowers grown in the shade.

and autumn closes in before the sum-mer is gone. Every hand held out to the children should be a helping hand, and every voice raised for the young should be a kindly one. Let ue one be so selfish us to want a boy to labor and endure hardships, because his own early days were hard. Rather let him be more pitiful, and strive to spare another youth, the sufferings of his own.
You see I have wandered off to my
